

Lewis Med Surg - Urinary/Kidney NCLEX Review Practice Questions Solved 2024

A 22-year-old patient's blood pressure at her physical done for her new job was 110/68. At the health fair two months later, her blood pressure is 154/96. What renal problem should the nurse be aware of that could contribute to this abrupt rise in blood pressure?

- A. Renal trauma
- B. Renal artery stenosis
- C. Renal vein thrombosis
- D. Benign nephrosclerosis - ANSWER-B. Renal artery stenosis

Renal artery stenosis contributes to an abrupt rise in blood pressure, especially in people under 30 or over 50 years of age. Renal trauma usually has hematuria. Renal vein thrombosis causes flank pain, hematuria, fever, or nephrotic syndrome. Benign nephrosclerosis usually occurs in adults 30 to 50 years of age and is a result of vascular changes resulting from hypertension.

A 24-year-old female donated a kidney via a laparoscopic donor nephrectomy to a non-related recipient. The patient is experiencing a lot of pain and refuses to get up to walk. How should the nurse handle this situation?

- A. Have the transplant psychologist convince her to walk.
- B. Encourage even a short walk to avoid complications of surgery.
- C. Tell the patient that no other patients have ever refused to walk.
- D. Tell the patient she is lucky she did not have an open nephrectomy. - ANSWER-B. Encourage even a short walk to avoid complications of surgery.

Because ambulating will improve bowel, lung, and kidney function with improved circulation, even a short walk with assistance should be encouraged after pain medication. The transplant psychologist or social worker's role is to determine if the patient is emotionally stable enough to handle donating a kidney, while postoperative care is the nurse's role. Trying to shame the patient into walking by telling her that other patients have not refused and telling the patient she is lucky she did not have an open nephrectomy (implying how much more pain she would be having if it had been open) will not be beneficial to the patient or her postoperative recovery.

A 78-year-old patient has Stage 3 CKD and is being taught about a low potassium diet. The nurse knows the patient understands the diet when the patient selects which foods to eat?

- A. Apple, green beans, and a roast beef sandwich
- B. Granola made with dried fruits, nuts, and seeds
- C. Watermelon and ice cream with chocolate sauce
