Sanders,1987 In the past twenty years the study of urban politics has shifted from a predominant concern with political culture and ethos to a preoccupation with political economy particularly that of urban development Urban scholars have come to recognize that cities are shaped by forces beyond their boundaries From that focus have emerged the views that cities are clearly engaged in economic competition that market processes are shaped by national policy decisions sometimes intentionally and sometimes inadvertently and that the costs and benefits of economic growth are unevenly distributed But what else needs to be said about the policies and politics of urban development To supplement prevailing theories The Politics of Urban Development argues that the role of local actors in making development decisions merits closer study Whatever the structural constraints politics still matters Collectively the essays provide ample evidence that local government officials and other community actors do not simply follow the imperatives that derive from the national political economy they are able to assert a significant degree of influence over the shared destiny of an urban population The impact of the collection is to heighten awareness of local political practices and of how and why they make a difference

Understanding Urban Land Values Michael Edwards,David Lovatt,1980 The Politics of Knowledge in a 'post-industrial' City Michael William Kline,1995 Civitas/What is City? Theresa Genovese,Linda Eastley,Deanna Snyder,1998 What constitutes a city How does human settlement in a specific site create a civilization Civitas the latest issue of the Harvard Architectural Review presents a series of provocative responses to these questions Architects critics educators and planners investigate the conflict between contemporary constructs of human settlement and more traditional definitions of cities Through a combination of projects and theoretical essays Civitas aims to provide a more diverse understanding of the nature of urbanism and community The conception of community as an orderly or focused environment in the landscape is an expression predominantly derived from the Western medieval city and perception This idea has been copied transformed and even romanticized but today its structure is no longer the image that dominates the landscape from the introduction to Civitas International review of modern sociology ,2006
