Global Trends 2025 ,2008 Global Trends 2025 A Transformed World is the fourth unclassified report prepared by the National Intelligence Council NIC in recent years that takes a long term view of the future It offers a fresh look at how key global trends might develop over the next 15 years to influence world events Our report is not meant to be an exercise in prediction or crystal ball gazing Mindful that there are many possible futures we offer a range of possibilities and potential discontinuities as a way of opening our minds to developments we might otherwise miss Some of our preliminary assessments are highlighted below The whole international system as constructed following WWII will be revolutionized Not only will new players Brazil Russia India and China have a seat at the international high table they will bring new stakes and rules of the game The unprecedented transfer of wealth roughly from West to East now under way will continue for the foreseeable future Unprecedented economic growth coupled with 1 5 billion more people will put pressure on resources particularly energy food and water raising the specter of scarcities emerging as demand outstrips supply The potential for conflict will increase owing partly to political turbulence in parts of the greater Middle East As with the earlier NIC efforts such as Mapping The Global Future 2020 the project s primary goal is to provide US policymakers with a view of how world developments could evolve identifying opportunities and potentially negative developments that might warrant policy action

We also hope this paper stimulates a broader discussion of value to educational and policy institutions at home and abroad

Introduction From Suez to Shanghai James Rogers,2009 This paper provides an initial foray into the emerging geopolitical situation in the Eurasian coastal zone and concentrates on the geostrategic activities of China India Japan Russia South Korea and the United States This comes at a time when geopolitics has been largely neglected at the European level the geographic dimension of European foreign and security policy has remained heavily entwined with the security and prosperity of the European Neighbourhood and parts of Africa While the European Neighbourhood particularly should not be neglected Europeans will have to develop and pursue a far more assertive and integrated grand strategy in the years ahead This paper has therefore identified the coastal zone stretching from the Suez Canal to the city of Shanghai and perhaps as far as Seoul as the most likely region to experience great power competition and general disorder over the coming decades What is more this coastal zone is of critical importance to the European Union not least because it is Europeans most important shipping route for manufactured goods and energy supplies The paper begins by examining the established and nascent maritime geostrategies of the Eurasian great powers and the potential consequences the new geopolitics might have for the European Union It then looks at European interests in the Suez to Shanghai zone and focuses on the role of geography in the region It also emphasises the likely challenges emanating from Chinese Indian Russian and American maritime competition The final section argues that as the relative balance of power between Europeans and other Eurasian powers shifts over the coming decades the European Union should provide a strong vehicle for the realisation of common European objectives ranging from the maintenance of the peace to building up European naval logistical and geopolitical capabilities
