Cruise Control-CC , Predictive Cruise Control for Road Vehicles Using Road and Traffic Information Péter Gáspár,Balázs Németh,2018-11-19 This book focuses on the design of a multi criteria automated vehicle longitudinal control system as an enhancement of the adaptive cruise control system It analyses the effects of various parameters on the average traffic speed and the traction force of the vehicles in mixed traffic from a macroscopic point of view and also demonstrates why research and development in speed control and predictive cruise control is important The book also summarises the main steps of the system s robust control design from the modelling to its synthesis and discusses both the theoretical background and the practical computation method of the control invariant sets The book presents the analysis and verification of the system both in a simulation environment and under real world conditions By including the systematic design of the predictive cruise control using road and traffic information it shows how optimization criteria can lead to multiobjective solutions and the advanced optimization and control design methods required The book focuses on a particular method by which the unfavourable effect of the traffic flow consideration can be reduced It also includes simulation examples in which the speed design is performed while the analysis is carried out in simulation and visualization environments This book is a valuable reference for researchers and control engineers working on traffic control vehicle control and control theory It is also of interest to students and academics as it provides an overview of the strong interaction between the traffic flow and an individual vehicle cruising from both a microscopic and a macroscopic point of view Stop & Go Controller for Adaptive Cruise Control ,1998 Cruise Control with Eyes J. Multi-object Adaptive Cruise Control Rainer Möbus,2008 In this thesis the development and implementation of a multi object adaptive cruise control ACC system is presented A sensor fusion configuration as well as object tracking and sensor fusion algorithms are presented to obtain a thorough representation of the traffic scene ahead of an ACC controlled vehicle The sensor fusion configuration includes a 77GHz radar sensor and an IR laser sensor for object detection A monocular CCD camera system is employed for lane recognition and the lane assignment of the detected objects Experimental results of all presented algorithms are given The control model and the control objectives of a multi object ACC system are presented The multi object ACC problem is looked at as a constrained optimal control problem incorporating the dynamics of the traffic scene the driver s desire to cruise at a certain velocity the lane assignment of the other road users the objective of respecting certain minimum distances to other road users and to adapt the velocity to the flow of the other road users Additionally overtaking a preceding vehicle on the right can be avoided The choice of the relevant object is implicitly determined by the cost function and the optimization criteria Constraints imposed by physical limitations as well as by comfort and safety considerations can be included and a receding horizon control strategy is applied The multi object ACC problem is looked at as a constrained finite time optimal control CFTOC problem with a mixed logical dynamical MLD system description With an efficient way to represent and evaluate the explicit solution to the corresponding multi parametric mixed integer quadratic program it is possible to include all desired control objectives in the problem formulation and still obtain an explicit solution suitable for real time operation Simulation results of this multi object ACC control approach are presented and the controller is compared to a reference ACC controller With the efficient controller representation the multi object ACC controller is implemented on the ECU of a standard production platform vehicle to confirm the simulation results in real traffic

Relationships Between Manual Driving and Driving with Adaptive Cruise Control P. Fancher, H. Peng, R. D. Ervin, Zevi Bareket, 2004

Design of a Cruise Control Deactivation Management System Thabo Jameson Selowa, 2023

As technology improves new ways are continuously being investigated to improve drivers experiences and steer them safely through congested highways or open country roads Connected and automated vehicles have been developed using communications with infrastructures V2I communication and vehicle to vehicle V2V communication They are fitted with connected automated transit signal priority eco cruising eco approach and intersection control Using such automation in vehicles reduces the high risk of accidents due to human errors which alone account for 90% of crashes However despite the technological advancements safety is still a major concern particularly with the cruise control function although it is said to be an accurate control with almost negligible reaction time when compared to the human driver The study therefore aimed to design a cruise control deactivation management system by investigating the types of engineering failures that can endanger the driver and the surroundings The study investigated the different road conditions that a vehicle is exposed to daily using risk priority number RPN methodology to identify the failures that can endanger the driver and the surroundings The study presents a recommended vibration level for each road profile at which the cruise control system management system should turn off These high level vibrations are captured when the vehicle drives through a pothole or drives over a speed cushion that alerts the driver to changed road conditions or drives into a road hump that the driver was unaware of or when the vehicle veers out of control from the tar road into gravel or onto the shoulder of the road and side shoulders are the most dangerous road profiles The study concluded by designing a prototype device that sends a signal to the engine control module to deactivate cruise control when the vibration intensity is  $0.4 \text{ m/s}^2$  The unit is attached to the vehicle's brake lights As high vibrations trigger exceed the vibration sensor threshold the relay is activated completes the circuit for the brake lights and switches off the cruise control system
