

„JUNG“ Precision Surface Grinding Machines Type F

are the continuation of the approved model JUNG G 60. The experiences, won with this model, have effected an essential change of our former design.

The Grinding Spindle Head is guided no more upward but downward into the enlarged and rigid machine base. The herewith obtained firmness of the whole machine is resulting in higher grinding effect and grinding precision in a shorter time and on larger surfaces than it was possible until now. The grinding wheel diameter of the model F 50 has been enlarged to 225 mm (9"). Increased overhang of the Grinding Spindle Head and wider grinding table are further improvements.

Illustration Fig. 2 shows grinding spindle head with truing apparatus and with dual dust exhaust. The grinding spindle, the horizontal arrangement of which has not been changed, allows also these new types of our JUNG Surface Grinding Machines to be used for many different operations. Not only surfaces can be ground to the highest precision, but also all other fine and exact processes, such as the grinding of slits, keyways, radii, forms, slide-ways etc., can be executed likewise. Our arrangement to traverse the table and not traverse the table and not the grinding spindle head is of special advantage, as this construction gives the Surface-Grinder still higher precision and an extraordinary mobility when performing exact and difficult grinding. Due to this arrangement, the operator can move the work table and the material to be ground with great ease and sensitivity under the Grinding Wheel, an advantage which has always been decisive in the extensive use of our JUNG Surface Grinding Machines.
