Simon E. Bull, Jill Margaret Farrant, Rita Hogan Mumm, Zerihen Tadele, 2024-01-18 Orphan crops play an important role in food and nutrition security especially in growing economies where small holder farmers produce the majority of food. Despite their importance in global agriculture and their often remarkable nutrient content and adaptation to challenging environmental conditions, orphan crops have received limited attention by the scientific community and industry. However, the diversity of neglected plant species provides a large genetic resource that could significantly contribute to broadening the biodiversity of trait desired crops for novel value chains, sustainable development and food security. The uptake of new plant breeding techniques, notably genome editing as well as omic tools, are now accelerating translation of basic research and facilitating the exploration of orphan crops. These advancements also give rise to public and political engagement discussions to maximize socio-economic impact. Given that the greatest need for food and nutritional security is in growing economies, issues of food sovereignty and sustainability of their food systems become front and centre. There is now an exceptional opportunity to tackle some of the major current challenges in agriculture, including climate change, sustainable cropping systems, food quality and nutritional security through broadening research in wild relatives of crops and on orphan species. This Research Topic seeks to showcase research on neglected plants using advanced molecular technologies, e.g. genome sequencing, omics, etc. and new plant breeding approaches, methods and tools. This Research Topic will also discuss the challenges and opportunities arising when modern breeding techniques are applied for translational research.
