Torphy

📅 2014 - 2018 📍 Budapest

Torphy is a well known multinational in the petrochemical industry and specializes in piping, scaffolding, insulation and even asbestos removal. I will remain grateful to Torphy for the rest of my life for offering me my first engineering job. I worked as an apprentice on the piping division, as a young engineer I had little experience in project management. Luckily I had an experienced senior project manager as a mentor at my side. He taught me the basic principles of project management and all about managing the stakeholder's expectations. This was the most important lesson I learned. Beside the technical documentation and daily routines, I learned a lot about client relations, socializing with humans was the best investment of time.

It was a tough job and a harsh environment sometimes but it challenged me to improve myself. Until today I use many principles of project management to complete all my task at hand in a structured and organized way.
