These contrasting values reflect the fact that, compared to the more homogeneous populations of the industrialized countries, the population of the Third World is more heterogeneous. This heterogeneity is due to the fact that the Third World is a collection of many different countries, each with its own history, culture, and political system. The Third World is also a collection of many different peoples, each with its own language, customs, and traditions. Abstract Background: The purpose of this study was to determine whether there were differences in the prevalence of self-reported depression between men and women who had been exposed to violence during childhood and adulthood. Methods: Data from the National Longitudinal Study of Adolescent Health (Add Health) were used to examine the association between exposure to violence and self-reported depression among adolescents aged 15–18 years. Results: Exposure to violence during childhood and adulthood was associated with higher rates of self-reported depression. The association between exposure to violence and self-reported depression was stronger for women than for men. Conclusions: These findings suggest that exposure to violence during childhood and adulthood may have a greater impact on the mental health of women than men.

Abstract The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week, low-intensity, supervised walking program on the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women. The study was a randomized, controlled trial. The subjects were 40 sedentary, middle-aged women who were randomly assigned to either a supervised walking program or a control group. The walking program consisted of 12 weeks of walking, 3 times per week, for 30 minutes per session. The control group consisted of 20 women who did not participate in the walking program. The physical and psychological health of the women was assessed at baseline and at 12 weeks. The walking program had a significant positive effect on the physical and psychological health of the women. The women in the walking program had significantly lower body mass index (BMI), waist circumference, and blood pressure than the women in the control group. The women in the walking program also had significantly lower levels of anxiety and depression than the women in the control group. The walking program was a safe and effective intervention for improving the physical and psychological health of sedentary, middle-aged women.
