
Essential Cell Biology - Chapter 12

Exam With Complete Solution

Indicate whether the following statements are true or false. If a statement is false, explain why it is false.

A. CO₂ and O₂ are water-soluble molecules that diffuse freely across cell membranes.

B. The differences in permeability between artificial lipid bilayers and cell membranes arise from variations in phospholipid content.

C. Transporters are similar to channels, except that they are allowing proteins as well as smaller organic molecules to pass through them.

D. Cells expend energy in the form of ATP hydrolysis so as to maintain ion concentrations that differ from those found outside the cell. - Answer A. True.

B. False. The primary difference between cell membranes and artificial membranes is that cell membranes have proteins responsible for creating a selective permeability, which varies with the location and function of the membrane.

C. False. Transporters work by changing conformation after specific binding of the solute to be transported. Channels exclude molecules on the basis of size and charge, but do not depend on specific recognition of the molecules moving through.

D. True.

Which of the following channels would not be expected to generate a change in voltage by movement of its substrate across the membrane where it is found?

(a) an aquaporin

(b) a sodium channel

(c) a calcium channel

(d) a proton channel - Answer A

Aquaporin where they channels are found in the plasma membrane of some cells, facilitate diffusion of water across the membrane. Because water is an uncharged molecule, its movement would not be expected to alter the voltage across the membrane.

Although the extracellular environment has a high sodium ion concentration and the intracellular environment has a high potassium ion concentration, both must be
