WaPOR V2 quality assessment Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, 2020-12-04 This document presents the results of a validation of the version 2 of the WaPOR database produced by the FRAME consortium partners eLEAF and VITO. The report summarises the work done by the validation partner ITC UTwente to assess the quality of the new V2 core data components currently used to estimate and derive agricultural water productivity for Africa and the Near East. WaPOR represents a comprehensive open access data portal that provides information on biomass productivity with focus on food and agriculture production and evapotranspiration, evaporative losses and water use for Africa and the Near East in near real time covering the period from 1 January 2009 to date. WaPOR offers continuous data on a 10 day average basis across Africa and the Near East at three spatial resolutions. The continental level 1 data 250m cover entire Africa and the Near East. L1 The national level 2 100m data cover 21 countries and four river basins. L2 The third level 3 data 30m cover eight irrigation areas. L3 The quality assessment focused on the core data of the WaPOR database i.e. the evaporative loss components: plant transpiration (T), soil evaporation (E) and interception (I) combined in ETI, the net primary productivity (NPP), the total TBP and above ground biomass productivity (AGBP) and reference evapotranspiration (RET).

Drinking Water Quality and Human Health Patrick Levallois, Cristina Villanueva Belmonte, 2019-04-04 The quality of drinking water is paramount for public health. Despite important improvements in the last decades, access to safe drinking water is not universal. The World Health Organization estimates that almost 10% of the population in the world do not have access to improved drinking water sources. Among other diseases, waterborne infections cause diarrhea, which kills nearly one million people every year, mostly children under 5 years of age. On the other hand, chemical pollution is a concern in high income countries and an increasing problem in low and middle income countries. Exposure to chemicals in drinking water may lead to a range of chronic non-communicable diseases, e.g. cancer, cardiovascular disease, adverse reproductive outcomes and effects on children's health, e.g. neurodevelopment among other health effects. Although drinking water quality is regulated and monitored in many countries, increasing knowledge leads to the need for reviewing standards and guidelines on a nearly permanent basis, both for regulated and newly identified contaminants. Drinking water standards are mostly based on animal toxicity data and more robust epidemiologic studies with accurate exposure assessment are needed The current risk assessment paradigm dealing mostly with one by one chemicals dismisses the potential synergisms or interactions from exposures to mixtures of contaminants particularly at the low exposure range Thus evidence is needed on exposure and health effects of mixtures of contaminants in drinking water Finally water stress and water quality problems are expected to increase in the coming years due to climate change and increasing water demand by population growth and new evidence is needed to design appropriate adaptation policies This Special Issue of International Journal of Environmental Research and Public Health IJERPH focuses on the current state of knowledge on the links between drinking water quality and human health Tuberculosis, Leprosy and Mycobacterial Diseases of Man and Animals Harshini Mukundan,Mark Chambers,Ray Waters,Michelle Larsen,2015-09-28 Mycobacteria are bacterial pathogens which cause diseases in humans and non human animals This monograph will primarily cover the most important and widely researched groups of mycobacteria members of the Mycobacterium tuberculosis complex MTC and Mycobacterium leprae across a wide range of host species M tuberculosis and M bovis are particularly relevant with the increasing drug resistance and co infection with HIV associated with M tuberculosis and the possible cross infection of badgers and cattle associated with M bovis This book will provide a reference for researchers working in different fields creating a work which draws together information on different pathogens and by considering the diseases in a zoonotic context provides a One Health approach to these important groups of diseases The Railway Gazette ,1962 Land News ,2010 *Railway Gazette.
