"Peaceful Breathing"

with Mellisa Dormoy
of Shambala Kids

The subconscious mind of your child is very susceptible and open right before going to bed and right after waking up in the morning. Take advantage of this special time and remind your child how wonderful he or she is, how much he's loved and how very proud of him you are. These affirmations can make a world of difference to your child, and can help ease stress and worries.

This guided breathing meditation calms, relaxes and eases busy minds. Next we'll focus our attention on details – an important foundation of meditation at any age and finally we'll use some feel good imagery that you can encourage your child to use every day.

"Close your eyes and take in a very slow, deep breath. Continue breathing deeply and feel the cool air come in through your nose and flow all the way down to your belly. Feel your belly expand out as you breathe deeply. Notice how the breath feels as it softly flows in through your nose, into your throat, and further and further down it goes. Make sure your belly is moving slowly up and down as you inhale and exhale.

Isn't it nice to feel this calm and quiet after the wonderful active day you've had? It's really good for our bodies and our minds just to feel this calming breath flowing in and out. When we learn to pay attention to our breathing, we're actually practicing meditation. Meditation helps us focus and it gives us peace. Everyone wants to be peaceful! Meditation is simply being very focused and calm within.

Now for this moment, just listen very carefully to all the quiet sounds outside of you and all around you. You may hear outside noises. You may hear cars, birds or perhaps something else. It's perfectly okay. We're just learning to pay attention... so just listen. (Pause) Now, turn your focus inward. Listen very carefully and quietly to what you hear happening within your body. Can you hear your heart beating? (Pause) Can you hear your breath as you breathe slowly and calmly in and out? Maybe your tummy is making noises; maybe everything is very, very quiet. Whatever is going on inside, just take the time to listen very carefully and notice everything that's going on, on the inside. (Pause)

Paying attention to the sound of your breath, it's almost magical. You're whole body is alive and feels so good! You know this breath is very special. It's part of the energy that flows in and out of us and by working with our whole body, it keeps us feeling so good inside and out. Allow the breath to fill up your whole body now and enjoy as the energy goes into each and every cell, each and every muscle of your body. Imagine that your happy breathe is bringing a big beautiful smile to every place in your body. Does that feel good? It feels good to me! Try to spend a little each day just imagining this. You'll be really amazed at how good it will make you feel all over.

Now when you're ready, you can open your eyes and give your body a big stretch. You've done a wonderful job and I can just imagine all that happiness you've spread everywhere in your body. I'm really proud of you for your meditation today!"

One Health: The Well-being Impacts of Human-nature Relationships Eric Brymer, Elizabeth Louise Freeman, Miles Richardson, 2019-11-07 In recent years there has been a growing body of evidence from fields such as public health architecture ecology landscape forestry psychology sport science psychiatry geography suggesting that nature enhances psychological health and wellbeing Physical activity in the presence of nature feelings of connection to nature engagement with nature specific environmental features e.g therapeutic water and trees and images of real and virtual nature have all been posited as important wellbeing facilitators Thus the association between natural environments and health outcomes might be more complex than initially understood Pritchard Richardson Sheffield Karmanov Freeman Akhurst 2015 in the development of wellbeing and health outcomes Furthermore traditional theoretical notions such as Biophilia topophilia restoration theories and stress reduction theories typically used to interpret findings are also being critiqued Often one of the main barriers for practitioners is the vast array of theories that claim to effectively explain research findings but that tend to be only partially relevant e g for Physical activity or restoration focus on the characteristics of the person e g nature relatedness and only some features of the landscape e g therapeutic landscapes This special edition therefore brings together cutting edge ideas and research from a wide set of disciplines with the purpose of exploring interdisciplinary or trans disciplinary approaches to understanding the psychological health and wellbeing benefits of human nature interactions
