- ☐ The gas particles inside it move faster, causing it to expand until it reaches at a new, larger size.
☐ The gas particles inside it move slower, causing it to contract until it reaches at a new, smaller size.
☐ The rate of nuclear fusion reactions inside it slows the nucleus.

Using that, we can find the balloon should not expand or contract. The gas particles should still move faster. Thus, there should be a small increase in the gas in the balloon, even though the balloon has a small, unchanging volume. Remembering that faster gas motion means higher temperature and that the balloon rate is very sensitive to temperature.
