During the early 19th century, American literature was in a state of flux. The literary tradition of the time was largely based on the works of English writers, and American writers were often seen as imitators. However, the American literary tradition was also characterized by a strong sense of individualism and a desire to express the American experience. This led to the development of a unique American literary tradition that reflected the values and beliefs of the American people.

The American literary tradition was also characterized by a strong sense of social responsibility. Writers were often seen as having a duty to speak out against social injustices and to promote the welfare of the American people. This led to the development of a literary tradition that was deeply concerned with the social and political issues of the time.
