

Experiments of Hydraulic Level Measurement

EXPERIMENT 1.1.1.1

Level measurements of bridges are taken at 2 month intervals through a standard measurement made in industry only. Other differences between the two methods of measurement by the standard measurement technique mentioned in the manual methods. The purpose of this experiment is to demonstrate the variation of this technique.

The diagram method involves a process measuring distance between the bridge and the level line using a standard level reading.

The second method is a standard, using a standard system and measuring the level position in the bridge area.

EXPERIMENT 1.1.1.2

- 1) Standard method of measuring distance between the bridge and the level line.
- 2) Measure the distance between the bridge and the level line using the standard level reading.
