PLANTING SEEDS

Planting seeds is like starting a tiny treasure hunt in your garden. Each seed is a promise of a new plant. We plant seeds in soil, the soft, dark earth that feeds the plants.

When you plant a seed, you need to give it water. Water helps the seed to wake up and start growing. The seed first sends a tiny root down into the soil to drink water and a little shoot up towards the sun.

Watching seeds grow is exciting! After a few days, you can see green shoots coming out of the soil. These shoots will grow into bigger plants, maybe flowers or vegetables. It's like magic happening right before your eyes.

Taking care of plants teaches us patience. Plants need time to grow. They also need sunlight and more water as they get bigger. It's fun to check on them every day to see how they change.

Teaching Chinese, Japanese, and Korean Heritage Language Students Kimi Kondo-Brown, James Dean Brown, 2017-09-25 This book contributes to building the research knowledge that language teaching professionals need in developing curriculum for the large population of East Asian heritage students including Chinese, Japanese, and Korean in countries like the United States, Canada, and Australia where speakers of East Asian languages are among the fastest growing populations. Heritage learners are defined as those who initially acquired certain levels of linguistic and cultural competence in a non-dominant language mainly through interaction with foreign-born parents and other family members at home. Heritage language instruction is currently a hot topic and is becoming a sub-discipline within the fields of foreign language education and applied linguistics. Special instruction for heritage language learners is on the rise, particularly in the U.S. and Canada. Providing theoretical and practical information about heritage language instruction in terms of curriculum design, learner needs, materials development, and assessment procedures, the goal of this book is not only to promote research about heritage students in East Asian languages but also to improve the teaching of these students in various educational settings and all over the world, especially in English-speaking countries. The volume is organized in four sections: Overview addressing the timeliness, necessity, and applications of the work and issues and future agendas for teaching Chinese, Japanese, and Korean heritage students; Language Needs Analysis; Attitude, Motivation, Identity, and Instructional Preference; and Curriculum Design, Materials Development, and Assessment Procedures. Teaching Chinese, Japanese, and Korean Heritage Language Students is intended as a primary text or reference for researchers, educators, and students in the areas of curriculum, pedagogy, and assessment studies related to teaching bilingual and heritage students in general and East Asian heritage students in particular.
