Measure	H_0 (invariance)	H_1 (noninvariance)
(A)	0°	200°
(B)	100°	0°
(C)	1000°	-100°

Assume that you are at latitude 40° N, which is the approximate latitude of Spokane. When making predictions about the future locations of stars A, B, and C, use the sky chart diagram on the next page. Remember that the sky appears to rotate around the NCP, which is a point at altitude $\approx 40^\circ$, azimuth $\approx 0^\circ$ in the diagram (as seen from Spokane). Try making your predictions first, and then use an active star within the Northern Diagram view simulation to check (and correct) your answers.

- (c) Mark and label the location of the North Celestial Pole. Since this location is directly above Earth's North Pole, it will not move as Earth rotates. Draw and label a circle around the NCP that represents the circumpolar region of the sky.

What are the ABN coordinates of star A, at $t = 12$ hours? 120 750, 100 000

Revised: 200 November 19, 1999, 12:10 PM

For what fraction of the day is star A visible above the horizon? 1.00

Shore and Belli's circle representing this year's results says the answer is a yes.
