

1. Political parties are organizations that are so focused on contesting elections that they fail to adequately represent the concerns and aspirations of Canadians. Is this an accurate statement?

- In other words, do parties focus so much on winning elections that it creates a cost to actually getting things done?
- But political parties are dominated by leaders and their advisors (for example, drafting election platforms)
- To win elections political parties must appeal to a broad cross-section of the electorate: they succeed by being "flexible and opportunistic" Tension between being pragmatic and principled
- ANSWER: YES!...so explain it!
- Consider what political parties and organization are DESIGNED to achieve
- Are they leader-dominated?
- Members-dominated?
- Parties are saying whatever they want to get the vote
- Say they will do things that we want but not actually thinking about doing something about it
  - Trudeau's platform has over 100 topics he wants to address
    - It is obviously impossible to address all of them BUT is he at least addressing the main issues that he addressed in his campaign (e.g. increasing corporate taxes, lowering taxes for the middle-class)?
  - Check out: http://www.huffingtonpost.ca/2016/02/11/promises-kept-broken-in-progress-during-trudeau-s-first-100-days-in-power\_n\_9212616.html
- Are our interests the most important to politicians?
  - E.g. Many citizens want the $15 minimum wage, Trudeau is not planning to enforce this as he feels it is not helpful
    - Forcing his idea of help or genuinely and effectively helping?
    - Research for the ways he plans to help and if they are being enforced
- Hidden political agenda?
- Trudeau said he will have the electoral reform done in the first 100 days but didn't
  - What does this say about him trying to complete the 100+ other promises he made
- Trudeau HAS opened the door to immigrants and refugees
  - Any small details he ignored?
  - How does he plan to follow up on this increase of the people in Canada?
- Trudeau said he would... (research and see if he did them yet, consequences of his actions)
  - Increase taxes for the corporations
  - Not tax the middle income earners
