

1977 Congressional Committee on Production Subsidies

1. a. When the French Government began the 1977 calendar year, the commitment to investment in payments from beneficiaries in the current account. The balance of payments in the U.S. current account will rise.
- b. When the commitment is paid by the French company, the investment in the current account is exchanged for payment of the current account. It is included in the U.S. current account as an export. The balance of payments in the U.S. current account will rise.
- c. When an American begins a business, the commitment is included in the U.S. financial account as a purchase of a financial asset by an American. The balance of payments in the U.S. financial account will fall.
- d. When an American charity sends a gift to France, it is treated as a transfer payment to a foreigner in the U.S. current account. The balance in the U.S. current account will fall.

2. a. The two diagrams above are evidence that the United States has experienced net capital outflows. Over the entire period covered the world would have also received net capital outflows from the United States, increasing there as a percentage of U.S. GDP. In fact, between 1970 and 1976, the United States received net capital inflows in its current account, offsetting most but not all of the outflows of long-run capital inflows from the rest of the world.
- b. Yes, the diagram indicates that world economies were more tightly linked in 1976 than they were in 1970. Because the United States has more exports abroad and other countries have more exports to the United States, "financial integration" has become a possibility. A financial price is now coming to more fully be paid by a financial price in another country.
