HUD official plans talks with mayor, troubled agency

 USA TODAY NETWORK — WISCONSIN

A key member of President Joe Biden's administration promised Thursday to straighten out Milwaukee's troubled public housing agency.

More than 10,000 Milwaukee residents — many of whom are low-income Black and Latino — rely on the Housing Authority of the City of Milwaukee for shelter. The agency operates about 5,200 rental units across the city and distributes about $40 million a year in federal rent subsidies.

In the past year, reports of heating outages, bed bug infestations and gun violence inside Housing Authority properties have made headlines and prompted calls for reform. Tenants and community organizers say the agency isn't doing enough to keep its residents safe or address concerns. For more than a year, they've been calling on federal regulators to step in and force change.

Adrianne Todman, a top federal housing official who joined Vice President Kamala Harris on a visit to Milwaukee Thursday, said her agency "has taken all these concerns seriously, and there will be something done about it."

Will Canadian fires smoke us out again?

Weather will determine whether blazes spread, haze moves south

David Clary
 Milwaukee Journal Sentinel
 USA TODAY NETWORK — WISCONSIN

Recent Canadian wildfire smoke provided a reminder of Wisconsin's smoke-filled summer days a year ago, as Canada's drought continues to provide ample conditions for new fires.

Yet, last year was an anomaly, one Canadian official said, and the forecast is a return to more regular wildfire activity this year.

What that means for Wisconsin is uncertain, of course, since weather plays a big role in determining if Canadian wildfire smoke gets to the state.

"We don't really expect to have another similar year twice in a row," said Richard Carr, a fire research analyst at the country's Federal Natural Resources Canada and its Canadian Forest Service. "It was kind of an outlier, I think. That goes back to the summer of 2023. (When) you had fairly widespread drought — that's still ongoing and it's actually intensified since then."

Carr said the current fires are centered in the western part of the country. A Canadian Interagency Forest Fire Centre Inc. map showed Friday there were 128 active fires in the country, mostly in British Columbia and Alberta. The fires have burned almost a million acres.

Drop box ban adds hurdle for rural voters

Absentee ballot options: A long drive to deliver, or hoping for fast mail

Alexander Shur
 Milwaukee Journal Sentinel

If voters in Burnside, Wisconsin, want to drop off their absentee ballots before an election, they have to go several miles outside of town, down a bumpy, rural country road that requires four-wheel drive most of the year, and to the doorway or mailbox of part-time clerk Melissa Kono's house.

Ideally, she said, there would be a ballot drop box at the town hall, which is conveniently located along a major highway. A drop box would also give absentee voters another alternative to mailing ballots, which can be slow in this rural western Wisconsin town of 500. Kono said.

But the Wisconsin Supreme Court banned the use of ballot drop boxes in 2022, ruling that state law required absentee ballots to be returned by mail or in person to the municipal clerk. In Burnside, that means getting it to Kono's residence.

The ban has made things more complicated for voters and municipal clerks, especially in rural areas. The state's ban on unattended drop boxes has coincided with an increase in reports of absentee ballots showing up too late to be counted.

On May 13, Wisconsin Supreme Court justices heard arguments in a lawsuit alleging the court incorrectly interpreted state law.

"I'm not a full-time clerk. I get paid a small stipend for doing this," Kono said. "I'm not going to sit down at the town hall all the time because I have to have a full-time other job. So I would like a drop box, just for convenience for both voters and for myself."

About two-thirds of Wisconsin voters favored having "secure and convenient drop off places for absentee ballots which would be accessible 24 hours a day," a Secure Democracy Foundation poll conducted in November 2023 found.

Meanwhile, more than three-quarters of clerks in Wisconsin support allowing at least one ballot drop box per municipality, according to a 2023 survey by Barry Sturges, director of the University of Wisconsin-Madison's Elections Research Center. More than half favored allowing municipalities to set up at least one, and as many drop boxes as they would like, while 22% said they would prefer to outlaw them.
