QUESTION I have been experiencing an increase in my blood pressure since I started taking the combination of an ACE inhibitor and a diuretic. I am concerned about this. Can you help?

ANSWER The combination of an ACE inhibitor and a diuretic is a common treatment for hypertension. However, it is important to monitor your blood pressure regularly. If you notice a significant increase in your blood pressure, it may be a sign that your medication is not working as well as it should. I would recommend that you contact your healthcare provider to discuss this. They may adjust your medication or suggest additional lifestyle changes to help manage your blood pressure.

The photograph shows a group of approximately ten people, mostly women, standing in a line. They are dressed in dark, possibly black, clothing. Some of them are holding what look like musical instruments or large, flat objects, possibly fans or pieces of paper. They are all looking towards the camera with neutral expressions. The background is dark and indistinct.
