Disler, 2008 In the thirty year

history of the study of language and gender theory and application have branched incrementally like the reaches of a family tree. The study of language and gender has progressed from an eye opening review of differences between the language of women and men to observations that language served to preserve domination of one sex over another and on to a cross cultural approach which observes that the ritual styles of talk that are observed among even the youngest girls and boys at play remain with them as women and men. Language and gender has been studied in many institutional and organizational environments including medical, legal, law enforcement, academic and business settings. While all of those settings have historically been marked by gender based differentials in opportunity, pay and power, one of the most metaphorically and demographically gender differentiated institutions has remained unexamined in the sociolinguistic literature: the military. The military is particularly interesting for linguistic study because it is veritably synonymous with the socio cultural construction of American masculinity and therefore a fascinating venue for the study of language, gender and power. With this innovative study, the author opens the door to considerations of power, gender dynamics and language and ideology in a community that has not yet been studied using the techniques of discourse analysis. And while some have criticized the utility of examining outlying cases, particularly in studies of gender or sexuality in language, the military community though not studied, can hardly be considered an outlying case. On the contrary, American military identity is part of American identity in that it influences the American masculine construct and has affected 26 million veterans and their families as well as those who may not be in the military but work with and near military members and installations on a regular basis. Also unique to this study and the author's analysis of the usage of ma'am and sir is an approach which does not necessarily examine how women and men use language but how those in their community use language to address them as women and men. This landmark book provides a refreshing perspective on gender and language dynamics in a setting not yet examined. Language and Gender in the Military will be a vital resource for those in gender and language studies.

Face-concern and Motivation Among Asian American and European American Students Ying Wong, 2007 Anthropological Linguistics, 1999 Armenian for Everyone Gayané Hagopian, 2005 Telling Our Lives Frida Kerner Furman, Linda Williamson Nelson, Elizabeth A. Kelly, 2005-06-22. Telling Our Lives explores how three working class women from Jewish, African American and Irish American backgrounds connect across their differences through storytelling and conversation. Three distinct voices intertwine in this book as the authors, now college professors, discuss family legacies of diaspora and dislocation, analyzing how these have shaped their personal and professional lives. Social class, ethnicity, gender, sexuality and spirituality intersect and diverge in these pages as the authors reflect on how they have been enriched and transformed by the relationships forged in the process of storytelling.

Cultural Performances Mary Bucholtz, 1994 Multilingual and Multicultural Contexts of Legislation Vijay Kumar Bhatia, 2003. This volume is one of the outcomes of the project Generic Integrity of Legislative Discourse in Multilingual and Multicultural Contexts which analyses international arbitration laws written in different languages and used across legal systems It documents the development of legal frameworks of a range of diverse countries highlighting in particular not only the diversity of their legislative frameworks processes and procedures but more importantly those socio political economic cultural and linguistic influences which have a significant role to play in the development of legal frameworks thus providing a crucial backdrop for our understanding of legal language in the global context
